

Fully Funded Practicum Opportunity

Vestergaard Frandsen

Vestergaard Frandsen is a European company that operates under a unique “humanitarian entrepreneurship” business model, and is dedicated to creating and deploying technologies that improve the health of people in developing countries. This approach has turned corporate social responsibility into Vestergaard Frandsen’s core business, and includes strong support of the MDGs.

Boston University

The Center for Global Health & Development (CGHD) is a multidisciplinary research center, embedded in the heart of Boston, that engages faculty from across Boston University to help solve the critical global health and social development challenges of our time. The mission of the Center is to conduct high-quality applied research and to advocate for the use of this research to improve the health of underserved populations around the world. To advance this mission, the CGHD partnered with Vestergaard Frandsen to offer this unique and fully funded practicum to address this critical health need.

If you are interested in:

- Finding a fully funded practicum in Africa.
- Learning how the private sector can support public health goals?
- Improving water quality by assisting in the assessment and development of plans to improve water quality and Household Water Storage and Treatment (HWST) of water supplies?

Then:

- Come and meet with Vestergaard Frandsen, Thursday Morning, JANUARY 26 to learn more about their fully funded practicum to work with their regional team in Accra, Ghana this summer.
- Email Steven Crimaldi at crimaldi@bu.edu to schedule an appointment.

