My experience in the Peace Corps was vital to my understanding of the best and most effective way to help the world, which led me to my current career in fundraising. My town had an incredible number of educated, hard working folks that needed money for their programs that they could not access.

My best successes were when I acted as either an ambassador to programs or people that could help them excel, or my work helping to create a grant for the local PLHIV (People Living with HIV) group. The lesson I took home was that I should continue that work in any of the fields I think are critical for global excellence, like education.
