

The Department of Romance Studies of Boston University is pleased to present a lecture by

Manlio Argueta

"Mirando hacia el futuro: reflexiones sobre el papel de la cultura y del arte en el desarrollo de la sociedad civil centroamericana"

Manlio Argueta is one of Central America's greatest living writers. He is best known for Un día en la vida. Translated into fifteen languages and taught at universities throughout the world, the novel depicts the repression in the Salvadoran countryside just prior to the beginning of the country's civil war. Since the year 2000 he has served as the Director of El Salvador's National Library, a role in which he has worked hard to rebuild the country's civil society in the post-war era.

Tuesday, November 29, 4:30 PM
College of Arts and Sciences, Room 132 (first floor)
Boston University, 685 Commonwealth Avenue

The lecture forms part of the Voces Hispánicas/Hispanic Voices initiative of the Department of Romance Studies of Boston University, made possible by the generosity of Santander Universities Global Division
