

Student Receiving Services
Consent Form for Peer Editing Network
2022-2023

I _____ am receiving editing services through the Peer Editing Network through the School of Theology. I understand that student editors will use the follow guidelines outlined by Boston University School of Theology in order to edit my work, which are as follows:

- Grammar
- Word Choice
- Punctuation
- Clarity
- Sentence and Paragraph Development
- Expressiveness
- Flow
- Thesis Development
- Logic of Argument
- Introductions
- Transitions
- Conclusions

The School of Theology faculty prohibits any editorial assistance with examinations. Students may not seek the assistance of volunteer editors, therefore, on any examinations. Students seeking volunteer editing services through this workshop are strongly encouraged to review STH academic code of at: <http://www.bu.edu/sth/academics/academic-conduct/>

Volunteer editors will not be held responsible for grades received on edited assignments nor plagiarism charges brought against a student receiving editing services. It is not the editor's responsibility to identify cases of plagiarism. Students receiving services from a student volunteer editor are strongly encouraged to review the definition of plagiarism which is listed at the website above.
